Global Exposure

MSCPA offers an unmatched interdisciplinary learning experience as India's top film school, teaching all major disciplines of the Cinematic and Performing Arts. Our students study in seven divisions that span the spectrum of film, television, and interactive media. They are exposed to the industry's most cutting-edge technological advancements and storytelling techniques and have the opportunity to meet and network with some of the industry's most successful practitioners.

Along with outstanding faculty and resources, the greatest strength of our programmes is the underlying philosophy that the best education results from the constant interaction between theory and practice.

Cinema & Media Studies majors work behind the camera and in editing suites to bring their own productions to life, allowing their practical knowledge of the creative process to inform their scholarly understanding of it.

This clearly prepares students to pursue their interests and ambitions in the entertainment industry. Perhaps more importantly, it instils in them a sense of discipline, teamwork, imagination, and perseverance that enables them to make contributions to our society that extend well beyond their specific fields.

Studying in India's Bollywood will give students a first-hand look at what goes on behind the scenes of the entertainment industry, as well as the opportunity to network with their peers and industry professionals from around the world.

Pedagogy

Film Education's approach to learning about film is that when it's properly used in the classroom, film is a powerful educational tool that can engage and enrich young people's learning and lives. The value of the cinematic experience is also central to our approach, which is why we try to forge links between school and cinema.

MSCPA will use a variety of learning elements to ensure that the curriculum is both broad and deep to keep students aware of global technological advancements, and new learning components. The programmes will be taught utilising a three-pronged approach that emphasises on Knowledge, Skills, and Application.
